INTRODUCTION

The history of the Herpetological collection of the Institute for Biological Research “Siniša Stanković” University of Belgrade is 80 years long. The collection was initially formed from private donations and by collecting new samples in the field. Also, the herpetological collection of the Institute of Zoology, Faculty of Natural Sciences University of Belgrade was added to it. This early collection consisted of samples from ex-Yugoslavia. Unfortunately, large parts of the initial collection suffered an immeasurable damage during the Second World War: most of the documentation and a large number of specimens were destroyed. During the professional career of Professor Milutin Radovanović (1900–1968), the collection was expanded. His seminal work has laid foundations of herpetology in the entire region, together with acquisition and organizing of the material in the collection. His contribution prior to 1941 included samples from islands of the Adriatic Sea (present-day Croatia).

After the Second World War, Professor Radovanović resumed the acquisition of the material – again mostly from the territory of present-day Croatia, but some samples were also collected from Serbia, Montenegro and Macedonia. Another important contributor was Professor Gojko Pasuljević (1931–1997), who contributed the specimens of Ablepharus kitaibelii and Vipera ammodytes from the province of Kosovo and Metohija, Serbia.

The next period of intensive acquisition of specimens started after 1968, with large population samples being deposited in the herpetological collection by the first author (G. Dž.). Since then, large amounts of material were being added to the collection. However, apart from assigning collection numbers to the specimens, there were no systematic efforts at their sorting and cataloguing. During the inventory undertaken between 2011 and 2015, the Batrachological collection was separated from the herpetological material, and it was published independently (Džukić et al. 2015).

Fig. 1. – Herpetological collection of the Institute for Biological Research “Siniša Stanković” University of Belgrade, Belgrade, Serbia.

The Herpetological collection of the Institute for Biological Research currently contains 8213 specimens originating from 23 countries (Fig. 1). Most of the specimens were collected in the territory of the former Yugoslavia, with Serbia and Montenegro being especially well represented. The collection is supplemented with specimens belonging to several countries from Asia, Africa, North and South America, as well as several European countries. The Herpetological collection contains several sub-collections of the herpetologists or a student association who significantly contributed with specimens or with distribution records. These sub-collections are as follow: Georg Džukić, Milutin Radovanović, Gojko Pasuljević, Ljiljana Tomović, Jozsef Mikuska, Jelka Crnobrnja Isailović, Rastko Ajtić, Imre Krizmanić, Nenad Labus, Sonja Đorđević, Students' research association "Josif Pančić".

MATERIALS AND METHODS

The collection of reptiles of the Institute for Biological research "Siniša Stanković" consists of herpetological materials preserved in 75% ethanol. Some specimens had previously been kept in the freezer or stored in formaldehyde, and were recently transferred to 75% ethanol. All materials are stored in labelled glass jars. During the period of seven years (from 2011 until the end of 2017) the complete sorting, conservation and inventory of the collection has been conducted, and new labels with consecutive catalogue numbers were added to the old ones, with a new collection number assigned to each jar. In some cases, the stored specimens only had collection numbers, so the localities and collection dates needed to be retrieved from field logs or collection protocols. Initially, a lot of specimens were stored in "mixed" jars, containing various species (e.g. all samples from one locality/date or contributed by one legator). After the systematization of all available information, the specimens were stored in single-species jars and grouped by the country and region of origin in order to facilitate their cataloguing and future work with the collection.

For the majority of species, identification was done according to the relevant herpetological literature. In the case of the recently described species (Dinarolacerta montenegrina sp. nov.), the specimens were identified based on the published diagnostic characters and geographic origin of samples (Ljubisavljević et al. 2007). Regarding taxonomy and current nomenclature, we followed Sillero et al. (2014) and Uetz & Hošek (2017). Anguis fragilis sensu lato was treated as a species complex: the samples in the collection presumably belong to at least three recently described distinct species (Jablonski et al. 2016), but these are difficult to distinguish both morphologically and ecologically, and their geographic distribution is still not clearly defined, so we opted for a conservative approach (Tomović et al. 2015a, b).

DISCUSSION

The Herpetological Collection stored at the Institute for Biological research "Siniša Stanković", University of Belgrade, includes 8213 specimens belonging to 65 species and 19 families. The best-represented families are Lacertidae (6043 – 73.6 %), Colubridae (612 – 7.5 %) and Viperidae (530 – 6.5 %), while Cheloniidae, Chamaeleonidae, Phrynosomatidae, Erycidae and Elapidae are represented only with one or two specimens. All species of Serbian herpetofauna (Tomović et al. 2014) and most reptilian species characteristic for the Balkan Peninsula are present in the collection.

This collection is distinctive because many of the species are covered with large population samples. Particularly interesting are the samples of populations exhibiting important evolutionary and/or biogeographical phenomena (Džukić & Kalezić 2004) such as endemicity, range marginality, intraspecific diversity, intergradation and hybridisation, variation in reproductive modes, range dynamism, heterogeneity and mosaicism. Significant are also the specimens or large population samples of endemic or subendemic species: Algyroides nigropunctatus (Džukić & Pasuljević 1979), Dalmatolacerta oxycephala (Podnar et al. 2014), Dinarolacerta montenegrina (Ljubisavljević et al. 2007), Dinarolacerta mosorensis (Ljubisavljević et al. 2016) and Podarcis melisellensis (Podnar et al. 2004). Samples from the contact zones of the newly described species belonging to the Anguis fragilis complex (Jablonski et al. 2016) provide the opportunity for future research of precise geographic distribution of the taxa belonging to this species complex. In addition, there are samples of the peripheral populations of: Darevskia praticola (Ljubisavljević et al. 2008), Podarcis erhardii (Tomović et al. 2014, Urošević et al. 2015), P. tauricus (Ljubisavljević et al. 2010a), Zootoca vivipara (Ljubisavljević et al. 2010b), Vipera ammodytes (Jelić et al. 2013), as well as samples from the isolated populations of species with fragmented ranges: Dolichophis caspius, Vipera berus, V. ursinii (Tomović et al. 2014, 2015a, b). Many of the distribution data from the collection were used to estimate conservation statuses of the Serbian reptiles (Tomović et al. 2015a, b). The holotype specimen and seven paratype specimens of the newly described species Dinarolacerta montenegrina (Ljubisavljević et al. 2007) are among the most valuable samples contained within this herpetological collection.

The collection is important due to its taxonomical and geographical richness as well as the presence of large population samples of species-series. On a par with its historical value, the Herpetological collection of the Institute for Biological Research "Siniša Stanković" University of Belgrade, stores data which are exceptionally valuable in the research opportunities they provide for the studies of systematics, biogeography, ecology, morphology, conservation and many other aspects of the biology of reptiles. Some of the older collection samples could be very valuable for future research, since habitats of several species are under increased anthropogenic pressures including pollution, disturbance and habitat destruction, and they could be used to assess the zero state. New technologies, such as micro-CT scanning, could facilitate more efficient morphological analyses and sharing of the shape data with other institutions, avoiding the risk of degradation, harm or loss of the original material, especially the type specimens or samples of historical value.

Although it is neither as old nor as rich as some other zoological collections (Boulenger 1889, Milto & Barabanov 2011), the significance of the collection publicized herein is substantial. To our knowledge, not many publications exist regarding similar collections in the neighboring countries (e.g. Mekinić et al. 2013). However, numerous museums, including some from the region, made their collections available online (e.g. www.prirodoslovni.com/inventarna/en). This is not surprising, because digitalization of natural history collections started already in the 1970s (Graham et al. 2004), and there are attempts at making a transnational network of museum repositories (www.biocase.org). Nevertheless, the importance of the existing biological collections (storing billions of specimens – Graham et al. 2004) rises in modern times, when we witness both the extinctions and discoveries of numerous species and various environmental stresses at the global level (Winker 2004, Garg et al. 2017). A recent illustration of how important collections can be is the loss of one (Warrell et al. 2010). Also, despite the fast development of new technologies and sometimes strong opposition to collecting of specimens from the wild, the idea that voucher specimens could be replaced with photos, recordings and tissue samples was decisively refuted (Dubois 2017, Garraffoni & Freitas 2017, Minteer et al. 2014, Rocha et al. 2014, Rogers et al. 2017). For all those reasons, we feel that this collection shall contribute to the wider herpetological community. It has already been used for several publications (see above), and its potential is yet to be fully appreciated (McLean et al. 2016).

РЕЗИМЕ

Овај рад представља попис врста гмизаваца депонованих у херпетолошкој збирци Института за Биолошка Истраживања „Синиша Станковић“, Универзитета у Београду. Збирка се састоји од 8213 примерака 65 врста гмизаваца сакупљених из 23 земље. Највећи део збирке садржи материјал са територије бивше Југославије. Врсте заступљене у збирци класификоване су у оквиру 19 породица (три у оквиру Testudines, осам у оквиру Lacertilia и осам у оквиру Serpentes). По броју примерака, најзаступљеније су породице Lacertidae (6043 – 73,6 %), Colubridae (612 – 7,5 %) и Viperidae (530 – 6,5 %), док су породице Cheloniidae, Chamaeleonidae, Phrynosomatidae, Erycidae и Elapidae заступљене са по једним или два примерка. Примерци свих врста гмизаваца који живе у Србији постоје у збирци, као и већина врста карактеристичних за Балканско полуострво. Специфичан значај збирке огледа се у великим популационим узорцима неколико врста. Осим историјског значаја, посебна вредност херпетолошке збирке огледа се у томе што депонован материјал омогућава студије систематике, дистрибуције, екологије, морфологије, конзервационе биологије као и различитих еволуционих и биogeографских феномена (нпр. ендемизма, интраспецијског диверзитета, хибридизације таксона, итд.).
